First off I want to congratulate Bill Gates and Microsoft for all they have accomplished what he has done with his company is truly the american dream. I also want whomever this concerns to know I am tired of my tax dollars paying for a lawsuit that simply put was initiated by a bunch of sore losers. I do realize that our great countries laws protect against market monopolies but when it happens do we have to treat them as though they are being punished? The fact is Microsoft has accomplished what every company wishes they can complete domination with a quality product. If any other company (Apple AOL & Netscape etc. . .) had the chance they would have done the same. The point is they could not and cannot achieve this so they start pointing fingers and by pointing fingers they openly admit to an inferior product. I am more than capable of installing different products on my Windows systems but I choose not to because I prefer Microsofts products. If the government splits Microsoft or makes them exclude some of the components of the operating system it will actually make Microsoft s market larger because people like me will still buy the seperated components which will probably cost more and hurt the consumer that the government was trying to protect in the first place.
